Iowa Receives Agricultural Disaster Designation for Six Counties

Secretary of Agriculture, Tom Vilsack has signed an agricultural disaster designation on July 8, providing agricultural assistance for six Iowa counties. The designated counties are: Woodbury, Monona, Harrison, Pottawattamie, Mills and Fremont. This designation will also include the contiguous counties of Cass, Cherokee, Crawford, Ida, Montgomery, Page, Plymouth and Shelby counties.

Heat, Storms Affecting Iowa This Week

National Weather Service forecasts indicate high temperatures and a potential for severe storms and localized heavy rain during the week. The potentially significant amount of rain could worsen existing flooding problems in western Iowa. Residents in this area should stay aware of weather conditions and be prepared to take precautionary measures, including evacuating, if necessary. High temperatures are also a concern for many people engaged in flood response efforts. For a list of ways to protect your health in high temperatures and humidity, view the Iowa Department of Public Health's press release at
